

The analysis of the process of getting higher medical education in the USA

Kravchenko Alina Borisovna

Belarusian state medical university, Minsk

Tutor(s) - Busko Ekaterina Vladimirovna, Belarusian state medical university, Minsk

Introduction

The American mentality is usually associated with some notions of productivity, success and outstanding achievements, especially when we talk about service industries or some scientific activities. It is obvious that there is always high quality of education for these kinds of progression. This report gives the idea about the main features that ensure such worthy results in the American health care sphere.

Aim

The main task is to study aspects of achieving decent results in the field of medical education on the American system's example.

Materials and methods

Performing of the report such sources of the Internet space as the websites of some medical schools, some blogs and forums for medical students' communication were used. These sorts of resources helped to identify some aspects related to the theme of the report by getting some information from people who have the experience of studying at some American medical schools. Also the specificity of the research required the analysis of the scientific literature's examples.

Results

Generally, the process of becoming a doctor in the USA is a multistage activity that requires a lot of different qualities of character and that is based on the intensive work of teaching staff and students' community. The knowledge about the ways some studying systems of medical education are performed in different parts of the world is very remarkable discovery for every medical student from the professional point of view. The research contains actual information about the essential aspects of getting higher medical education in the USA, about some american students' opinions on this process and about general tips we can use during our educational process. Almost all these facts are directed to practical use. This work can improve the complicated process of getting medical education because there is the experience of the huge amount of American medical students pieced together.

Conclusion

- 1) We have differences between our and american approaches to the medical education.
- 2) There are various lifehacks and tricks that are to make our educational process much more effective and our goals easier to achieve.
- 3) Learning from the experience of foreign colleagues is the essential activity because it can bring many benefits.